Egypt - Winter 2015

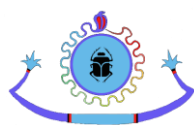

Its been a wonderful winter in Egypt!

We kicked the season off with our new introduction of a “Holiday Budget Tour” after having been asked to host a small group of friends that wanted to come. We had so much fun and were offered so many unique opportunities--that we’ve decided to add this special discounted tour over every Winter Solstice/Christmas Holiday when possible.

In January we were thrilled to meet and travel with Dr. Robert Schoch and his wonderful wife, Katie and have Gary Evans join us on yet another excellent adventure! We enjoyed a fantastic blend of great minds-- all passionate about sharing their wealth of knowledge and wisdom, which included our fabulous group of well-informed adventurers.

Please check out this fabulous video, filmed onsite by Yousef, of Dr. Robert Schoch sharing his world famous and well educated opinion about the dating of the Sphinx and many other mysteries surrounding it:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7bNg7NyWfmM>

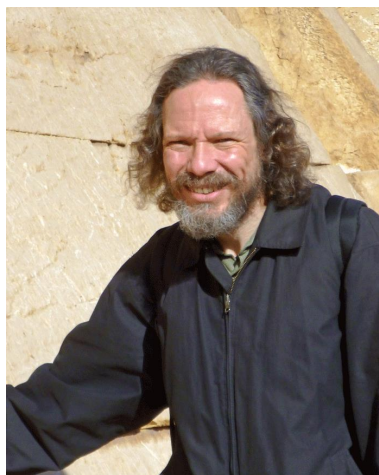

We had a wonderful group to share the Christmas Holidays with on our first 'Holiday Budget Tour'

Considered to be an off-season time to visit Egypt, we were treated to experiencing many of the sites with only a few other fellow travelers.

It was a huge honor to meet and share a magnificent journey with Robert and Katie Schoch. We were thrilled to discover that we had so many shared interests and beliefs, only to be enhanced by the different perspectives derived from our respective fields of study. It was a most memorable experience shared with an equally fabulous group of adventurers, including our longtime friend and archeo-acoustics expert Gary Evans!

Full itinerary and details: <http://khemitology.com/wp-content/uploads/2013/05/November-2015-Journey-to-the-Center-of-Yourself-II-Full-Itinerary.pdf>

Our intention with these sacred tours is to take you on a journey of awakening. Much of what we think is “REAL” in our world--is not. We will examine our core beliefs and begin the process of releasing what no longer serves us. Patricia Awyan will give multiple lectures about the pantheon of Neters (Egyptian gods and goddesses) and the ancient symbolism --and how they collectively give us a map of the nature of our reality as well as the tools to raise our awareness and awaken our latent senses!

We will have workshops and meditations and utilize the energy of the sites to enhance and heal our body, mind and spirit--and raise our vibration.. We will practice resonant toning in special areas at some of the sites (and inside the King's Chamber of the Great Pyramid) where one cannot help but feel the transformation occurring within. We will release the old--and fill ourselves up with the unlimited potentials that are our birth right!

Testimonials from our October 2015 Journey to the Center of Yourself:

“We are getting to the tip of the iceberg with you Patricia. You have so much depth, ready to be shared with like-minded women. This tour was supported by Yousef and Mohamed - but designed, directed and energetically guided by you. Your vision and creation of this tour was perfect for me.

The Presentation you shared with us over several hours, was just amazing. Succinct, professional and the subject matter is best experienced in Egypt to be deeply understood. How perfect to have this wisdom shared with us while cruising the Nile”

“I have already recommended this tour to like-minded people. They were spellbound about the activities provided and the unique experiences we had. (Two people intend to go on the November 2015 tour).” Lynn

“Patricia is an outstanding speaker. She conveys information usually difficult to understand in such a simple way understandable to everybody. Patricia’s lecture opened my eyes on a complete different world. She manages in her lecture to link the dots of our reality. I truly believe that everybody would benefit in listening to her lecture.”

“I certainly would recommend this tour to anybody who is on a personal journey and who is looking for answers within themselves. The tour allows letting go of things or beliefs that don’t serve us anymore and helps to embrace the world of endless opportunities.” Mara

The Khemit School Team is going to Australia! Mohamed, Yousef & Patricia have been invited to speak at:

The Wesley Center on Pitt Street, in Sydney, Australia on May 8th, 2015 from 6:30 to 10 PM

Khemit Korner A Forum to Explore Your Questions and Share Your Experiences

This month: Journey of Discovery led by Brien Foerster --Evidence of a highly advanced Pre-Incan civilization at sites in Peru and Bolivia!

Yousef and I were extremely grateful to be invited to join Brien Forester, and his fabulous wife, Irene, on his September 2014 “Techno-Spiritual Tour” of ancient sites in Peru and Bolivia, along with Stephen Mehler and an insightful group of like-minded individuals!

After witnessing Brien’s enthusiasm—and his lectures about these ancient “Incan” sites during our tours together here in Egypt these past two years, we were excited at the prospect of viewing and experiencing them for ourselves. We were not disappointed!

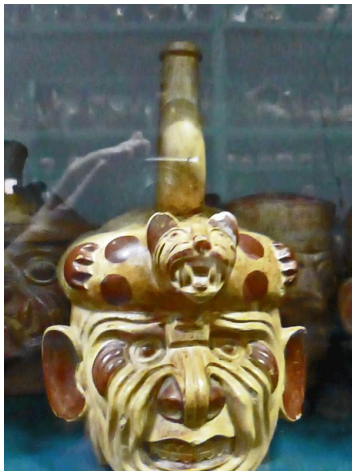

We explored the remnants of a vast Incan Empire that originated in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries C.E. and stretched for more than 2,000 miles from Ecuador to Chile at the time of the Spanish arrival in 1515. However, even more exciting was the evidence of a far more ancient and advanced civilization that the Inca seemed to have held in high esteem and built their structures on top of and/or within the far more ancient megalithic structures. We saw much to indicate that the Incan civilization sprung up after a huge cataclysm and inherited these sites—similar to how early dynastic and pre-dynastic Egyptians inherited the legacy of a far more ancient Khemit?

After flying into Lima, Peru, we met with the group and spent our first day visiting two museums. As a researcher of ancient symbolism worldwide, I was immediately struck by the similarities with other cultures, including ancient Khemit.

The artifacts in these museums spoke to me of a reverence for our eternal cycles, as well as a deep understanding of our natural world and cosmic forces. The many feline images, as well as serpents and birds held an almost eerie syncretism with the symbolism we experience in Egypt—and many other ancient cultures worldwide.

Throughout our journeying together at sites in and around Cusco, Sachsayhuaman , the Sacred Valley and Machu Picchu in Peru, and at Puma Punku and Tiahuanaco in Bolivia, I was delighted to discover the many site references to stellar and solar patterns and cycles as well as symbolic references to how these patterns are reflected within us! Through a shared very ancient heritage or similar advanced knowledge and wisdom- indigenous cultures worldwide seem to be referencing an energetic reality that our modern day scientists are just now beginning to discover.

The image on the left in the picture below (taken at the Larco Museum, in Lima, Peru) is an almost mirror reflection of the ancient Egyptian Neter, Amun, who represents the stage of the sun at night, when it is 'hidden' from our view.

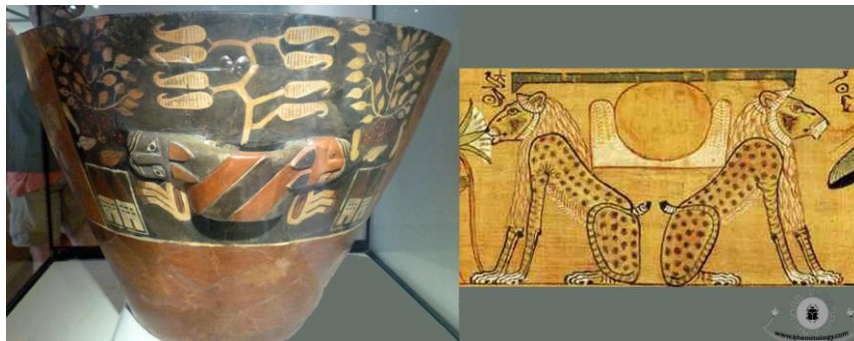

Dynastic Egyptian and Incan 'religious' icons are reflective of forces of nature, and of solar and stellar cycles. Their architecture was also designed and built to recognize the position and cycles of the Sun, Moon and stars. Both civilizations erected monuments which referenced the position of the Sun at the solstices, and marked them with great festivals.

As Above, so below—echoed on multiple levels ... Egyptians celebrated the birth of the Sun/Son, as the Neter, Horus, during the Winter Solstice, the time when the days start to become longer again after shrinking to the shortest day of sunlight during the year. However in the Southern Hemisphere this moment occurs during the northern hemisphere's Summer Solstice—currently on June 21st - and was known as Inti Ramyi—the birth of the Sun God, Inti.

The ancient Egyptians likened the flow of water to the energetic wave patterns of all living entities that exist in our three dimensional reality. This same idea of energy being related to the flow of water is reflected in the Inca's fascination with the Milky Way. The entire Sacred Valley of the Vilcanota River near Cusco, was considered a mirror of the Milky Way in the very same way that the Egyptians viewed their Nile River Valley.

I discovered that the Inca, located below the Equator, focused much of their attention on the dark spaces or rifts between the stars of the constellations in the Milky Way, in direct opposition to how ancient cultures north of equator, including Egyptians, focused on the constellations themselves to describe universal cycles and creation. Many of their stories and mythologies speak to the same cycling of ages and how the cycles of the stars affect the 'seeding' and fertility of the agriculture—and life on earth.

What's even more fascinating is that Egypt, Peru and Bolivia all show stark and prolific evidence that a far more ancient and very advanced civilization inhabited earth thousands of years earlier than we've been taught. These megalithic structures built with bio-organic elements are impregnated with a wealth of knowledge and wisdom just waiting to be tapped.

“ A tradition which has been credited by many learned men over the centuries is that the Ancients encoded their knowledge of the world in the dimensions of their sacred monuments.” - John Michell

SACHSAYHUAMAN, PERU

Another similarity with the sites in Egypt was the creative employment of running water throughout all of the sites. The sophisticated channeling and use of running water was evident everywhere and probably had multi-level significance. The channeled waterworks at Tipon in Peru were amazing, and reminded me of the Red and White Springs in Glastonbury that originate from the Tor. The water channels and fountains at Tipon once depended on two water sources. One source, surface water from melting glaciers, has recently dried up due to changes in climate, however, the other source, a series of deep underground springs from the sacred mountain known as Pachatusan, are still flowing today.

Some of us couldn't help but, drink the fresh and sparkling water flowing from the series of channels that you can see in the picture on the far right below. The series of waterways begins with one channel that is then divided into two, and then four — only to be drawn back into two and then one again with complete precision. I can only guess what the energetic purpose for this might be.

Below are pictures of 'sound niches' in structures at Coricancha in Cusco, and Ollantaytambo along with inserts of a sound niche and image of the 'hospital' at Saqqara in Egypt. The use of sound frequency in healing practices at the very ancient 'hospital' at Saqqara, has long been known about thank to the legacy of work of Abd'el Hakim Awyan, so it take long for Yousef, Stephen and I to recognize these same features, built for sound and frequency enhancement in Peru. I was particularly delighted to witness this explanation being given and displayed by what seemed to be a 'mainstream' tour guide to a small group of travelers —while I was exploring the site of Ollantaytambo. The resonance achieved when sampling these niches myself was fantastic!

We also saw many areas of ancient earthworks - hills and mountains that were intentionally terraced for what many believe were for agricultural purposes. Moray is an archeological site near Cusco, Peru consisting of several huge terraced circular depressions, the largest of which is about 30 meters (98 ft.) deep, as well as an irrigation system. The purpose of these depressions is uncertain, but their depth, design, and orientation with respect to wind and sun create a temperature difference of as much as 15 °C (27 °F) between the top and the bottom. Some believe that the Incas created the site to study the effects of sun and temperature on crops.

We couldn't help but recognize that the shape and stepped design could have been used for harmonic acoustics. When Yousef played his flute at the bottom of the site, it could be heard clearly at the top. Was sound frequency also an element in the enhancement of their agricultural processes...or was the site used for some alternative purpose altogether?

I couldn't help but notice the unique design on this bowl in the picture below, that I spotted at the National Museum of Archaeology, Anthropology and History in Lima. It seemed strangely similar to the patterns of the earthworks at Moray.

MORAY, PERU

We had heard Brien speak about the knobs found on the megalithic structures in Peru when comparing them to those found on the Giza Plateau in Egypt, so it was a treat for us to see them for ourselves and speculate on their purpose. We mostly agreed that they might have been used for some sort of frequency or sound regulation.

I can't speak of touring with Brien without mentioning elongated skulls! Brien has brought the truth of this ancient phenomenon to light—for me and many others. Yousef and I have since discovered the little known fact that there have been many such skulls found at pre-dynastic sites in both Upper and Lower Egypt. Brien is leading the way for much more in depth research and attention to be given to where, why, who and when this ancient race of what I believe were humans...once walked the earth.

I can only begin to express all of the remarkable and mind boggling things we viewed and experienced on this adventure with Brien and Irene in this short article. It was absolutely magical! It was not only a feast for the mind....but, absolute sustenance for the body and soul as well. Oh yes, we were physically challenged and benefited from the exercise of climbing up and down the sharp inclines that these sites, nestled in the Andes Mountains, offered us. Yet we could also find the time to feel and 'breathe in' the powerful energies emanating from the structures and the earth itself in both Peru and Bolivia. I loved every part of this well planned adventure! I am completely enchanted with the people and sites in Peru—and felt a profound connection with everything I encountered in Bolivia. I can hardly wait to return with an entirely different series of questions and intentions!
