Egypt in Process of Transformation

On June 30th Egyptian Protestors rallied to unseat Mohammed Morsi

Millions took to the streets across Egypt to demand the resignation of President Morsi on the first anniversary of his inauguration. Morsi did not fulfill the promises he made to the people, and the economic and political outlook has only worsened. The Egyptian people do not want to have more restrictions placed on their personal freedoms by extreme Islamist groups. They have now tasted and desire basic personal liberty.

Reuters reported that as many as 14 million people in the nation of 84 million took part in Sunday's protests across the country. Many international media outlets stated that this could have been the largest demonstration seen in the history of the world.

With the world's spotlight on so many standing together in pursuit of freedom and their basic human rights not only in Egypt, but also in other countries, including Turkey, Brazil and Syria, and more---the mass consciousness of the entire planet can shift, awaken and realize the limitless possibilities of our empowerment when we are united in our efforts. It is a time to see our similarities with mankind worldwide, and not allow anyone to divide us by creating fear or anger over our differences.
